

State Of Gujarat vs C. G. Desai And Others on 13 November, 1973

Equivalent citations: 1974 AIR 246, 1974 SCR (2) 255, AIR 1974 SUPREME COURT 246, 1974 (1) SCC 188, 1974 LAB. I. C. 187, 1974 2 SCR 255, 1974 2 SCJ 13, 1974 (1) SERVLR 420, 1974 (1) LABLJ 252

Author: Ranjit Singh Sarkaria

Bench: Ranjit Singh Sarkaria, V.R. Krishnaiyer

PETITIONER:
STATE OF GUJARAT

Vs.

RESPONDENT:
C. G. DESAI AND OTHERS

DATE OF JUDGMENT 13/11/1973

BENCH:
SARKARIA, RANJIT SINGH
BENCH:
SARKARIA, RANJIT SINGH
KRISHNAIYER, V.R.

CITATION:
1974 AIR 246 1974 SCR (2) 255
1974 SCC (1) 188
CITATOR INFO :
R 1980 SC1185 (1,5)
R 1987 SC 424 (22)
R 1987 SC1676 (27)
D 1990 SC1607 (17)

ACT:
Engineering Service-Bombay Engineering Service Rules,
1960--Rule 7(ii)-Direct recruits demanded their pre-selection service counted for the purpose of promotion If permissible-Whether Art. 16 of the Constitution violated.

HEADNOTE:
Respondent No. 1 was officiating as Deputy Engineer from May 16, 1955 to December 3, 1959 in the P.W.D. of the then State of Bombay. Thereafter, he was selected by competitive examination and appointed to a post in B.S.F. Class-11 Service. Under the Engineering Service Rules, 1960, a direct recruit is required to undergo training for one year and thereafter to work on probation for another year as in-charge of a sub-division. Since respondent No. 1 had already worked as officiating Deputy Engineer, the initial period of one year's training was dispensed with and he was directly placed in-charge of a subdivision. After completion of 2 years, he was confirmed as Deputy Engineer in Class-11 from December 3, 1961.

In June 1961. the Committee appointed to prepare t select list of Deputy Engineers for promotion as officiating Executive Engineers, did not consider respondent No. 1 for promotion because he had not put in 7 years (reduced to 6 years in 1961) service requisite under rule 7(ii) for such promotion. The Government's stand was that the service rendered by the direct recruits prior to their appointment to Class-11 could not be taken into account in computing their eligibility service of 7 years. The case of respondent no. 1 was that under the Rules, his pre-selection service (from 16-5-1955 to 2-12-1959), must be tacked on to his past-selection service for calculating the requisite period of his eligibility service.

In the case of respondents Nos. 2 and 3 also. the Government did not count the period of their pre-selection service for the purpose of their eligibility services and hence the dispute.

The High Court found that the differentiation made by the Government in the application of the rules, had no reasonable nexus with the object of promotion and the action of the Government was discriminatory and so violative of Art. 16 of the Constitution. On appeal, the question for consideration was whether the action of the State Government in treating 'differently' the promoters and direct recruits in Class-11 for the purpose of computing the period of their eligibility service requisite for promotion as officiating Executive Engineers, violates the constitutional guarantee of equal treatment enshrined in Art. 16 of the Constitution. Allowing the appeal,

HELD (i) It is manifest that direct recruits and promotees in class constitute two distinct groups or classes. This classification has a historical background and a rational basis. The promotees from the lower ranks have only one chance of getting into Class-11 service, as against three available to the direct recruits. Further, for a considerable time, recruitment by promotion from the ranks of temporary officiating Deputy Engineers etc., to Class-11 service remained frozen with consequent stagnation and loss of incentive in the service' At the time of their entry into Class-11 service, the promotees are, broadly speaking, far older than the direct recruits, and many of the promotees may have less than 7 years to go before attaining the age of superannuation. If in the case of both these groups of promotees and direct recruits with different backgrounds and dissimilar circumstances, the period of 7 years eligibility service were to start from the date of their absorption in Class-III then for most of the promotees, there would be a rare chance of ever getting promotion as officiating Executive Engineers. The classification is thus based on intelligible differential.

256

(ii) If a person, like any of the respondents, to avoid the long tortuous wait leave his position in the "never ending" queue of temporary officiating Deputy Engineers etc., looking for promotion and takes a short-cut through the direct channel to Class 11 service he gives up once for all, the advantages and disadvantages that go with the channel of promotion and accepts all the handicaps and benefits which attach to the group of direct recruits. He cannot, after his direct recruitment, claim the benefit of his pre-selection service and thus have best of both the worlds. It is well settled that so long as the classification is reasonable and the persons falling in the same class are treated alike, there is no question of violation of the constitutional guarantee of equal treatment. [261D]

Gangaram v. Union of India, [1970] 3 S.C.R. 481, referred to.

(iii) The select list is prepared on the basis of 'seniority-cum-merit' and the inter-se seniority of the selected officers in the lower ranks is ordinarily to be maintained in the promoted ranks. Acceptance of the respondent's contention will make the smooth working and uniform application of this principle of seniority-cum-merit difficult. The inter-se seniority of the selected officers will be seriously disturbed and the Department will be faced with the anomalous situation of a junior officer, with pre-selection service, becoming eligible to be considered for promotion over the head of his seniors. even in the same group, having no such fortuitous pre-selection service to their credit. There is nothing in rule 7(ii) which compels the interpretation that in the case of direct recruits also. their pre-selection service as officiating Deputy Engineers, if any, should be counted towards their "eligibility service". Such an interpretation would create two classes even amongst direct recruits and thus result in inequality of treatment rather than in removing it. Under the circumstances, it cannot be said that the respondents possessed the required length of service in Class-11 to be entitled to promotion along with others. [262C]

Prabhakar Yeshwant Joshi v. State of Maharashtra, [1970] 2 S.C. referred to.

JUDGMENT:

CIVIL APPELLATE JURISDICTION : Civil Appeal No. 2170 of 1970.

Appeal by special leave from the judgment and order dated 1/2-5-69 of the Gujarat High Court at Ahmedabad in Special Civil Application No. 1221 of 1968.

M. C. Bhandare and S. P. Naylor, for the appellant. Y. S. Chitale, V. N. Ganpule and P. C. Kapur, for the respondents.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by SARKARIA, J.-This appeal by special leave by the State is directed against the judgment and order, dated November 24, 1970, of the High Court of Gujarat allowing a writ petition of (1) C. G. Desai; (2) B. L. Joshi and (3) H. N. Shah filed under Article 226 of the Constitution. The material facts are not in dispute and may now be stated Respondent No. 1 herein (original petitioner No. 1) was officiating' as Deputy Engineer since May 16, 1955, in the P.W.D. Department of the then State of Bombay and he continued in service as such until on December 3, 1959, he was selected and appointed as a result of the competitive examination held by the Public Service Commission, to a post in B.S.E. Class 11 Service. Under the Engineering Service Rules, 1960 (hereinafter called 1960 Rules), a direct recruit is required to undergo training for a period not exceeding one year and thereafter to work on probation as in-charge of a Sub-Division for a further period of one year. Since Respondent No. 1 had already worked as officiating Deputy Engineer, the initial period of one year's training in his case was dispensed with and he was directly placed in-charge of a Sub-Division. On completion of his two years' probation he was confirmed as Deputy Engineer in Class 11 with effect from December 3, 1961. Sometime in June, 1961, a Committee appointed by the State Government prepared a select-list of Deputy Engineers for promotion as officiating Executive Engineers; but the case of Respondent No. 1 was not considered for the reason that he had not put in 7 years (reduced to 6 years in 1961) service requisite under Rule 7(ii) for such promotion (hereinafter, for short, called eligibility service'). The Government's stand was that in the case of Deputy Engineers directly recruited through a competitive examination held by the Public Service Commission, service, if any, rendered by them as officiating Deputy Engineers prior to their appointment to Class 11 (hereafter called 'pre-selection service') could not be taken into account in computing their eligibility service. The case of Respondent No. 1 herein was that this stand of the Government was wrong and, under the relevant Rules his pre-selection service (from 16-5-1955 to 2-12-1959) as officiating Deputy Engineer had to be tacked on to his post-selection service for calculating the requisite period of his eligibility service. When the next select-list was prepared in the year 1963, Respondent No. 1 was included in that list and, in consequence, promoted as officiating Executive Engineer. Since then he has been working as such in the promoted rank.

Respondents Nos. 2 and 3 herein (original petitioners Nos. 2 and 3) were promoted as Deputy Engineers on July 8, 1957, and September 28, 1957, respectively. They continued to work in the capacity till December 3, 1959, when they, too like Respondent No. 1 were directly recruited as Deputy Engineers in Class 11 Service as a result of the competitive examination held by the public Service Commission. On completion of their probationary period of two years, they were confirmed as Deputy Engineers on December 3, 1961. In their case, also, the Government did not count their pre-selection service from July 8, 1957 to December 3, 1959 for computing their eligibility service, for further promotion; and, in consequence, they were also not considered eligible for selection at the time of the preparation of the select-lists of 1961, 1963 and for the subsequent years upto 1966. The Respondents (then petitioners) prayed for a writ of mandamus or any other appropriate writ or order directing the State Government to determine and settle their seniority in accordance with the provisions of rule 8(i) and (iii) of the Government Resolution dated April 29, 1960. The main ground taken in the petition before the High Court, was, that the action of the Government in excluding from computation the service rendered by the Respondents as officiating Deputy Engineers prior to their selection as Deputy Engineers Class 11 Service, was violative of Article 16 of the Constitution of India. The contention was that the rule of eligibility for promotion had not been uniformly applied to all Deputy Engineers inasmuch as in the case of persons who were recruited to Class 11 by promotion, their pre-selection service as Officiating or Temporary Deputy Engineers was computed towards their eligibility service but the same treatment was denied to Deputy Engineers directly recruited.

In the counter filed on behalf of the State, it was averred that this distinction between the direct recruits and promoters in computing their eligibility service for further promotion was observed as a matter of deliberate policy. It was added that at the time of the preparation of the select list of Deputy Engineers fit to be promoted as Executive Engineers in 1965, the claims of officiating Deputy Engineers appointed subsequent to 1-11-1956, were not considered; while the claims of directly recruited Deputy Engineers though appointed after November 1, 1956, were so considered because of the special provision for the latter category of Deputy Engineers as per Government Resolution, dated 29th April, 1960. The Government therefore, felt that as the direct recruits were getting special treatment because of being direct recruits, they should not be allowed a further advantage of counting, for the purpose of further promotion, their pre-selection service towards the period of their eligibility service.

The High Court found that the differentiation in question made by the Government in the application of the Rules, had no reasonable nexus with the object of Promotion; and the action of the Government was therefore clearly discriminatory and amounted to a denial of equal opportunity to directly recruited Deputy Engineers like petitioners Nos. 1 to 3. In the result, the High Court allowed the application of the present Respondents 1 to 3 and issued a writ of mandamus directing that their case "for promotion as officiating Executive Engineers shall be considered on the basis that the pre-selection service rendered by them as officiating Deputy Engineers prior to their direct recruitment as Deputy Engineers was liable to be taken into account in counting the minimum period of seven years service requisite for promotion as officiating-Executive Engineers."

In order to appreciate the controversy, it is necessary to notice briefly the history of these Engineering Services and the relevant rules which are appendages to various Government Resolutions passed from time to time. Originally, the Government of Bombay in the Public Works Department passed a Resolution on March 22, 1937, in pursuance of which Bombay Engineering Service consisting of Class I and Class II was constituted. The posts of Chief Engineer, Superintending Engineer and Executive Engineer were placed in Class I, while those of Deputy Engineers were put in Class II. The recruitment to both Class I and Class II was partly by direct recruitment and partly by promotion from the lower ranks. In 1939, further rules were framed under which recruitment to Class 11 Service was to be made either:

(a) by nomination under rule 11 under the guarantee given to the College of Engineering, Poona or

(b) by promotion from the

(i) Subordinate Engineering Service;

(ii) Permanent and Temporary Supervisors and

(iii) Temporary Engineers appointed on annual sanction.

259 On the 27th May 1947, the Government of Bombay withdrew its guarantee of certain appointments given to the students of the Engineering College, Poona; and thereafter, appointed a Committee (known as Gurjar Committee) to examine the question of recruitment to the Engineering Services and allied matters. In the meantime, the Government of Bombay made direct recruitment to Class I and Class II Service through competitive examination held by the Public Service Commission.

Though the Committee made its recommendations in 1951, yet this provisional arrangement appears to have continued upto April 29, 1960, on which date, the Government of Bombay in the Public Works Department passed a Resolution delineating the principles of recruitment to the Bombay Service of Engineers, Class I and Class 11. Shortly, thereafter the Bombay State was bifurcated; but the 1960 Rules continue to be applicable to the Engineering Services of the new State of Gujarat, to which the Respondents herein, were allotted. By the Resolution of 1960, the existing Class I and Class II Services were continued. The appointments to both these Services are to be by direct recruitment through competitive examination held by the Public Service Commission and also by promotion in the ratio of 75 : 25. As per rule 2, the candidates appointed from either service have to be on probation for a period of two years; in the first instance as trainees for a period not exceeding one year, and then in a probationary capacity, in-charge of a Sub-Division for one year more. On satisfactory completion of the period of probation, the candidates recruited from both the Services are confirmed as Deputy Engineers in the cadre of Class 11 or as Assistant Engineers in Class 1, as the case may be. The provisions of 1960 Rules material for our purpose, are to be found in Rules 6, 7 and 8, which read thus "6(i)

(ii) For absorption into Class 1, a Class 11 Officer must be in the permanent Bombay Service of Engineers Class 11 cadre, should have at least 15 years service to his credit in Class 11 in temporary and permanent capacities, and should be holding an officiating divisional rank, at the time of such absorption. On such absorption, the Class 11 Officers shall be confirmed as Executive Engineers.

(emphasis supplied)

(iii)

7(i) Since the percentages in the superior posts of direct Class I recruits and promoters from Class II this so be about 75 and 25, the number of promotions from Class II in any year would be about one-third of the number of directly recruited Assistant Engineers confirmed as Executive Engineers during that year. Recruitments in the past, have, however been erratic and insufficient to Class I. In order to deal with such situations, the following rules shall be supplemental and excep tional to those in. paragraph 6 above

(ii)As far as possible promotions as Officiating Executive Engineers shall be so made that the promote under consideration from Class II has to his credit at least 6 years longer service than a promote under consideration from Class I, subject as far as practicable, to the condition that a Class I Officer shall not hold a divisional rank at less than 4, and, a Class II Officer at less than 7 years' service.

(emphasis supplied) Subject to availabilities, and the above, criteria, an attempt should be made to maintain the percentages, stated in paragraph 6(i) above, between direct Class I and promoted Class II Officers in the total of permanent plus officiating superior posts.

(iii) and (iv)

8(i) The Sub-Divisional Posts in the Department are at present, manned by direct recruits to Bombay Service of Engineers Class II Cadre, Deputy Engineers confirmed from sub- ordinate service of Engineers, the temporary Deputy Engineers recruited by the Bombay Public Service Commission, Officiating Engineers and similar other categories. These various categories are being compiled into two lists only, (i) Bombay Service of Engineers Class II cadre of permanent Deputy Engineers and a List of officiating Deputy Engineers

(ii)All direct recruitment of temporary Deputy Engineers have been stopped, further officiating vacancies will be manned from the rank of the subordinate Service of Engineers.....

The question that falls for decision is : Whether the action of the State Government in treating "differently" the promotees and direct recruits in Class II, for the purpose of computing the period of their eligibility service requisite for promotion as Officiating Executive Engineers, violates the constitutional guarantee of equal treatment en- shrined in Article 16 of the Constitution ? Mr. Bhandare, learned Counsel for the appellant has in the course of his elaborate arguments stressed these points :

(1)The two channels of promotion of direct recruits and promotees are separate and there would be no violation of Article 16, if these two classes continue to be treated differently;

(2)It would be open to the Government to lay down and accept different conditions for these two classes in the matter of their further promotion to Class I Service;

(3) Since all the direct recruits constitute one class, it is not permissible to the Government to treat the members of the same class differently and to make a distinction in the matter of their promotion by taking into account the pre-selection service of an officer when he was not a direct recruit in Class II. To do so, would be to give an undue advantage to a direct recruit with pre-selection service over his colleagues who did not have such pre-selection service to their credit.

Learned Counsel further urged that there existed a rational basis for this classification and differential treatment of direct recruits and promotees in the matter of their promotion to Class 1. Reliance, has been placed on two decisions of this Court in Prabhakar Yeshwant Joshi and or s. v. The State of Maharashtra and Ors. (1) and Ganga Rain and Ors. v. Union of India and Ors. (2). We shall presently examine the effect of those decisions.

Mr. Chitley, learned Counsel for the respondents maintained, in reply, that rule 7(ii) does not permit discrimination between promotees and direct recruits in the matter of computing the seven years' service as Deputy Engineer requisite for further promotion as Officiating Executive Engineer. The point sought to be made out is that rule is correctly interpreted and uniformly applied, then direct recruits cannot be denied the advantage of tacking their pre-selection service if any, to their 'post-selection service in Class II.

After hearing the learned Counsel on both sides, we think that the contentions of Mr. Bhandare must prevail. It is manifest that direct recruits and promotees in Class II constitute two distinct groups or classes. This classification has a historical background and a rational basis. The promotees from the lower ranks have only one chance of getting into Class II service, as against three available to the direct recruits. Further, for a considerable time, recruitment by promotion from the ranks of Temporary officiating Deputy Engineers etc. to Class II Service remained frozen with consequent stagnation and loss of incentive in the service. Circumstances being what they are, promotees, at the time of their entry into Class II Service, are, broadly speaking, far older than the direct recruits; and, many of the promotees may have less than 7 years to go before attaining the age of superannuation. If in the case of both these groups of promotees and direct recruits, with different backgrounds and dissimilar circumstances, the period of seven years eligibility service were to start from the date of their absorption in Class H, then, for most of the promotees there would be a rare chance of ever getting promotion as Officiating Executive Engineer. The classification is thus based on intelligible differentia.

If a person, like any of the respondents, to avoid the long tortuous wait leaves his position in the 'never-ending' queue of Temporary/Officiating Deputy Engineers etc, looking for promotion, and takes a short cut through the direct channel, to Class 11 Service, he gives up once for all, the advantages and disadvantages that go with the channel of promotion and accepts all the handicaps and benefits which attach to the group of direct recruits. He cannot, after his direct recruitment claim the benefit of his pre-selection service and thus have the best of both the worlds. It is well settled that so long as the classification is reasonable and the persons falling in the same class are treated alike, there can be no question of violation of the constitutional guarantee of equal treatment. (1) [1970] 2 S.C.R. 615, (2) [1970] 3 S.C.R.481.

As pointed out by this Court in Ganga Ram's case (supra), in applying the wide language of Articles 14 and 16 to concrete cases, doctrinaire approach should be avoided and the matter considered in a practical way. If the claim of the respondents to the counting of their pre-selection service is conceded, it will create serious complications in running the administration; it will result in inequality of treatment rather than in removing it. If the pre-selection service as Officiating Deputy Engineers of direct recruits having such service, is taken into account for the purpose of promotion, it would create two classes amongst the same group and result in discrimination against those direct recruits who had no such pre-selection service to their credit.

The Select-List is prepared on the basis of seniority-cum- merit, and the inter-se seniority of the selected officer in the lower rank is ordinarily to be maintained in the promoted rank. Acceptance of the respondents' contention will make the smooth working and uniform application of this principle of 'seniority-cum-merit' difficult. The inter-se seniority of the selected officers will be seriously disturbed and the Department will be faced with the anomalous situation of a junior officer, with pre-selection service, becoming eligible to be considered for promotion over the head of his seniors, even in the same group, having no such fortuitous pre-selection service to their credit. There is nothing in rule 7 (ii) which compels the interpretation that in the case of direct recruits, also, their pre-selection service as Officiating Deputy Engineers, if any, should be counted towards their 'eligibility service'. Rule 7(ii) is silent with regard to the method of computing the seven years period of eligibility service. The interpretation of this condition of seven years service in rule 7(ii) is not res integra. It came up for consideration before this Court in Prabhakar Yeshwant Joshi's case (supra). The petitioners therein were also direct recruits to the posts of Deputy Engineers in B.S.E. Class 11. The respondents therein had entered Class 11 Service by promotion. The petitioners challenged the promotion of the respondents to the posts of Officiating Executive Engineers as being contrary to the principles of natural justice and violative of Arts. 14 and 16 of the Constitution. It was inter alia contended that under the 1960 Rules in force, respondents 2 to 5 therein were only Officiating Deputy Engineers and they had to put in, after confirmation, as Deputy Engineers, seven years of actual service before being eligible for promotion as Officiating Executive, Engineer. Speaking for the Court, Jaganmohan Reddy J. negated this contention in these terms:

"Even this rule 7(ii) does not indicate that the qualifying service of either of six years or of 7 years specified in the rule has to be permanent service. In cl. (ii) of r. 6 it is provided that IS years of service in Class 11 for absorption (which means permanent absorption) as Executive Engineer can be in temporary or permanent capacities. There is nothing in r.(ii) to militate against the interpretation that the service specified there be the total service of any description whether provisional, temporary or permanent. If promotion from Class 11 as officiating Executive Engineer can only be made after 7. years of permanent service, then there would be no meaning in including the temporary service in Class 11 for the purpose of absorption as Executive Engineer. Even r.6 upon which Shri Gupta has laid great emphasis in support of his contention, does not, in our view, justify an interpretation that 7 years' service required to entitle persons in Class II for promotion as an officiating Executive Engineer should be permanent service in Class I..... (within brackets ours) As we have seen earlier, (ii) of r. 7 does not use the word 'belong' but requires only that the person under consideration for promotion should be from Class II service. To be in Class II service the Deputy Engineer promoted from subordinate service has to put in at least 3 years of service as officiating Deputy Engineer before being confirmed and thereafter he can when he is promoted to the next higher rank be confirmed as Executive Engineer if he has put in 15 years in Class II service in temporary or permanent capacities and is holding an officiating divisional rank namely of an Executive Engineer. If temporary service can be taken into account for confirmation as an Executive Engineer, so can officiating service, and if, officiating service can be taken into consideration, there is no impediment to a Deputy Engineer with 7 years' service whether officiating, temporary or permanent, to entitle him for promotion as an Executive Engineer.....

We cannot, therefore, accept the contention of Shri Gupta that a promotee officiating Deputy Engineer Class II is not entitled to be considered for promotion under r.7 to the post of, an officiating Executive Engineer unless he has put in 7 years of service from the date of confirmation."

What is quoted above, no doubt, pertains to the case of promotees, with which the Bench was mainly concerned. But the observations in the penultimate paragraph of the judgment excerpted below, incidentally cover the issue now before us:

"None of the petitioners, it is averred, was included in the Select List of 1964 or 1965 because not only did any of them not have the requisite seven years, service as Deputy Engineer at the relevant time..... The petitioners however denied in their rejoinder that "he lists were prepared keeping the criteria laid down by the rules, but in our view, it is significant that they did not possess the required length of service in Class II for them to be entitled to promotion when the respondents were included in the list and promoted.: as such they cannot challenge the appointments made as' being in violation of Art. 14 or Art.

16." (emphasis supplied) 522SCI/74 In the light of the above discussion, we are of the opinion that the learned Judges of the High Court were in error in holding that the impugned action of the Government suffered from the vice of discrimination and as such was violative of Art. 16 of the Constitution. We, therefore, allow this appeal, set aside the judgment of the High Court and dismiss the writ petition, leaving the parties, in the circumstances to their own costs.

S.C. Appeal allowed.