SANTOSH HEGDE, J.

A Deed of Conveyance dated 9.6.1994 executed by a company named ICI India Ltd. in favour of Chand Chhap Fertilizer and Chemicals Ltd. when presented for registration, the concerned Registrar referred the said document under Section 47-A(II) of the Stamp Act to the Collector complaining of the non compliance of Section 27 of the said Act and praying for proper valuation to be made and to collect the stamp duty and penalty payable on the said document. The Collector after inquiry levied a stamp duty of Rs.37,01,26,832.50 and a penalty of Rs.30,53,167.50. The said order came to be challenged by the aggrieved party in a revision under Section 56 of the Stamp Act before the Chief Controlling Revenue Authority in Stamp Revision No.36/95-96 and the said Revisional Authority as per his order dated 4.4.95 partly allowed the challenge and so far as the imposition of penalty was concerned the same was set aside and slightly modified the stamp duty levied by the Collector. Consequent to the order of the Revisional Authority, the appellant herein became liable to pay stamp duty on the said Deed of Conveyance amount to Rs.36,68,08.887.50. This order of the Revisional Authority came to be challenged before the High Court in Civil Misc.Writ Petition No.9170/95 which came to be dismissed and as against this order of the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad dated 7.7.1997, the appellant has preferred the above civil appeal. Briefly stated, the facts leading to the controversy in question are as follows : ICI India Ltd., a company registered under the Companies Act, 1956 executed an agreement of sale dated 11.11.1993 wherein it agreed to transfer on an as is where is basis and as a going concern its fertilizer business of manufacturing, marketing, distribution and sale of urea fertilizer in favour of Chand Chhap Fertilizer and Chemicals Ltd. (hereinafter referred to as the CCFCL) also a company incorporated under the Companies Act, 1956 which company has since been renamed as M/s. Duncans Industries Limited, Fertilizer Division, Kanpur Nagar (the appellant herein) for a total sale consideration of Rs.70 crores which was termed as slump price in the agreement. The said agreement also stated that the vendor would on the transfer date transfer the fertilizer business by actual delivery of possession to the CCFCL in respect of such of the estates and properties mentioned in the agreement as were capable of being transferred by actual and/or constructive delivery and in respect of the estates requiring transfer by execution of necessary documents vesting the title thereof in CCFCL, and it was further agreed and declared that the ownership in respect of the assets and properties comprised in the fertilizer business to be transferred as per the agreement, would be deemed to be vested in CCFCL on and from the transfer date which, according to the agreement means 1.12.1993 or such other date as may be agreed to by and between ICI India and CCFCL. The term fertilizer business was defined to mean and include the following other properties :

(i) Demised land being plot nos. 2B and 5 and the sub-divided portion of plot No.2 demarcated and admeasuring in the aggregate an area of 243.4387 acres equivalent to 9,85,159.50 sq. mtrs. Being the unshaded portion shown on the plan annexed hereto together with the buildings and structures thereon forming part of the fertilizer business as on the Transfer Date;

(ii) freehold land and residential building thereon with the name Chandralok, situate at plot no.4/284, Parbati Bangla Road, Kanpur comprising 94 residential flats;

(iii) freehold land and residential building thereon with the name Chandrakala, situate at Navsheel Apartments, 56 Cantonment, Kanpur comprising a Guest House on the ground floor and 3 residential flats on the first floor;

(iv) Plant and machinery relating to the Fertilizer business including the Ammonia Manufacturing Plants, the Captive power plant and all other movable capital assets including vehicles, furniture, air-conditioners, stand-by systems, pipelines, railway siding etc., as on the Transfer Date and wheresoever situate, all of which relate exclusively to the Fertilizer Business and are owned and in the possession of ICI or are owned by ICI but in the lawful possession of any third party for and on behalf of ICI:

Pursuant to the said agreement, a deed of conveyance dated 9.6.1994 was executed by the said ICI in favour of CCFCL, on the presentation of the said Conveyance Deed for registration. The Sub- Registrar made a reference to the Collector under Section 47-A(2) of the Stamp Act, 1899 (hereinafter referred to as the Act) stating that in the document under reference all the details required under Section 27 of the Act had not been given by the parties, hence valuation and examination is essential and requested the Collector to determine the value as required under the Act and the Rules and to take action to realise the deficit stamp duty and penalty. Consequent upon this reference made by the Sub- Registrar, the Collector after necessary inquiry as per his order dated 20.2.1995 referred to above, levied stamp duty and penalty to which reference has already been made. Being aggrieved by the said order of the Collector, the appellant preferred a revision petition to the Chief Controlling Revenue Authority who, as already stated, by his order dated 9.6.1994 set aside the penalty and modified the duty payable to Rs.36,68,08,887.50 which order came to be challenged before the High Court unsuccessfully. Before the High Court the appellant had challenged the authority of the Sub-Registrar to make a reference to the Collector on the ground that there was no material to entertain any reason to believe that the market value of the property which was the subject-matter of the conveyance deed had not been truly set forth in the instrument. The High Court negatived the said contention after considering the arguments of the appellant in detail, and before us no argument has been advanced on this score. Mr. M L Verma, learned senior counsel appearing for the appellant, urged that the High Court committed an error in coming to the conclusion that the plant and machinery which were transferred by the vendor to the appellant, were immovable properties, attracting the provisions of the Stamp Act and at any rate under the conveyance deed dated 9.6.1994, the vendor had not conveyed any title to the appellant in regard to these plant and machinery. He also contended that the High Court erred in relying upon paragraphs 10 and 11 of the conveyance deed to come to the conclusion that the plant and machinery were the subject-matter of the said deed. He contended that the said paragraphs merely made a reference to an earlier instrument and mere reference to some earlier transaction in a document does not amount to incorporation in that document of the terms and conditions relating thereto. It was also contended that the High Court failed to look into the intention of the parties who by an agreement dated 11.11.1993 had treated the plant and machinery as movables and have delivered possession of the said plant and machinery as movables on 11.12.1993. Hence, the said plant and machinery is neither immovable property nor the property which has been transferred by virtue of the deed of conveyance dated 9.6.1994. Therefore, the value of the said plant and machinery could not have been taken into consideration for the purpose of arriving at the correct and true value of the property conveyed under the deed of conveyance. He also contended that the valuation in regard to the plant and machinery made by the authorities and as accepted by the High Court is incorrect and contrary to law.

Mr. Gopal Subramaniam, learned senior counsel appearing on behalf of the State, in reply, contended that the document dated 11.11.1993 (agreement of sale and transfer of fertilizer business) by ICI in favour of the CCFCL contemplated an agreement to transfer the business of manufacturing, marketing, distribution and sale of urea fertilizer that is fertilizer business itself with a stipulation that the first stream, second stream and the third stream urea manufacturing plants as well as the Ammonia manufacturing plants would also be transferred as a part of the transfer of fertilizer business of the ICI as a going concern. He also contended that a reading of the document at Para 1(e)(i) which defines fertilizer business clearly shows that the intention of the vendor was to transfer all properties that comprised the fertiliser business. He also drew our attention to the observations of the High Court which had in specific terms noted that the learned counsel representing the appellant before it, had not seriously challenged the valuation made by the authorities, hence he contended that the challenge made to the valuation by the appellant before us should not be countenanced. We have heard learned counsel for the parties and the question that arises for our consideration is :

whether by the conveyance deed dated 9.6.1994, the plant and machinery were also transferred; and if so, whether the High Court was right in accepting the valuation as made by the authorities for the purpose of stamp duty payable ? Considering the question whether the plant & machinery in the instant case can be construed as immovable property or not, the High Court came to the conclusion that the machineries which formed the fertilizer plant, were permanently embedded in the earth with an intention of running the fertilizer factory and while embedding these machineries the intention of the party was not to remove the same for the purpose of any sale of the same either as a part of a machinery or scrap and in the very nature of the user of these machineries, it was necessary that these machineries be permanently fixed to the ground. Therefore, it came to the conclusion that these machineries were immovable property which were permanently attached to the land in question. While coming to this conclusion the learned Judge relied upon the observations found in the case of Reynolds v. Ashby & Son (1904 AC 466) and Official Liquidator v. Sri Krishna Deo & Ors. (AIR 1959 All. 247). We are inclined to agree with the above finding of the High Court that the plant and machinery in the instant case are immovable properties. The question whether a machinery which is embedded in the earth is movable property or an immovable property, depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case. Primarily, the court will have to take into consideration the intention of the parties when it decided to embed the machinery whether such embedment was intended to be temporary or permanent. A careful perusal of the agreement of sale and the conveyance deed along with the attendant circumstances and taking into consideration the nature of machineries involved clearly shows that the machineries which have been embedded in the earth to constitute a fertiliser plant in the instant case, are definitely embedded permanently with a view to utilise the same as a fertiliser plant. The description of the machines as seen in the Schedule attached to the deed of conveyance also shows without any doubt that they were set up permanently in the land in question with a view to operate a fertilizer plant and the same was not embedded to dismantle and remove the same for the purpose of sale as machinery at any point of time. The facts as could be found also show that the purpose for which these machines were embedded was to use the plant as a factory for the manufacture of fertiliser at various stages of its production. Hence, the contention that these machines should be treated as movables cannot be accepted. Nor can it be said that the plant and machinery could have been transferred by delivery of possession on any date prior to the date of conveyance of the title to the land. Mr. Verma, in support of his contention that the machineries in question are not immovable properties, relied on a judgment of this Court in Sirpur Paper Mills Ltd. v. Collector of Central Excise, Hyderabad (1998 1 SCC 400). In the said case, this Court while considering the levability of excise duty on paper-making machines, based on the facts of that case, came to the conclusion that the machineries involved in that case did not constitute immovable property. As stated above, whether a machinery embedded in the earth can be treated as movable or immovable property depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case. The Court considering the said question will have to take into consideration the intention of the parties which embedded the machinery and also the intention of the parties who intend alienating those machinery. In the case cited by Mr. Verma, this Court in para 4 of the judgment had observed thus : In view of this finding of fact, it is not possible to hold that the machinery assembled and erected by the appellant at its factory site was immovable property as something attached to earth like a building or a tree. The Tribunal has pointed out that it was for the operational efficiency of the machine that it was attached to earth. If the appellant wanted to sell the paper-making machine it could always remove it from its base and sell it." From the above observations, it is clear that this Court has decided the issue in that case based on the facts and circumstances pertaining to that case hence the same will not help the appellant in supporting its contention in this case where after perusing the documents and other attending circumstances available in this case, we have come to the conclusion that the plant and machinery in this case cannot but be described as an immovable property. Hence, we agree with the High Court on this point. The next question for consideration is whether the vendor did transfer the title of the plant and machinery in the instant case by the conveyance deed dated 9.6.1994. Here again, it is imperative to ascertain the intention of the parties from the material available on record. While ascertaining the intention of the parties, we cannot preclude the contents of the agreement pursuant to which the conveyance deed in question has come into existence. We have noticed that as per the agreement it is clear what was agreed to be sold is the entire business of fertilizer on an as is where is basis including the land, building thereon, plant and machinery relating to fertilizer business description of which is found in the definition of the term fertilizer business in the agreement itself which has been extracted by us hereinabove. It is not the case of the appellant when it contends that the possession of plant and machinery was handed over separately to the appellant by the vendor that these machineries were dismantled and given to the appellant, nor is it possible to visualise from the nature of the plant that is involved in the instant case that such a possession de hors the land could be given by the vendor to the appellant. It is obviously to reduce the market value of the property the document in question is attempted to be drafted as a Conveyance Deed regarding the land only. The appellant had embarked upon a methodology by which it purported to transfer the possession of the plant and machinery separately and is contending now that this handing over possession of the machinery is de hors the conveyance deed. We are not convinced with this argument.

Apart from the recitals in the agreement of sale, it is clear from the recitals in the conveyance deed itself that what is conveyed under the deed dated 9.6.1994 is not only the land but the entire fertilizer business including plant and machinery. A perusal of Clauses 10, 11 and 13 of the said deed shows that it is the fertilizer factory which the vendor had agreed to transfer along with its business as a going concern and to complete the same the conveyance deed in question was being executed. There is implicit reference to the sale of fertilizer factory as a going concern in the conveyance deed itself. That apart, the inclusion of Schedule III to the conveyance deed wherein a Plan delineating the various machineries comprising of the fertilizer factory is appended shows that it is the land with standing fertilizer factory which is being conveyed under the deed, though an attempt to camouflage this part of the property sold is made in the recitals, in our opinion, the parties concerned have not been able to successfully do so. While considering this question of transfer of plant and machinery being part of the conveyance deed or not, reliance can also be placed on the application filed by the appellant before the appropriate authority of the Income-Tax Department wherein while disclosing the market value of the immovable property sought to be transferred the appellant himself has mentioned the value of the property so transferred as Rs.70 crores which is the figure found in the agreement of sale which agreement includes the sale of plant and machinery along with the land. A certificate issued by the appropriate authority under Section 269 UL(3) of the Income Tax Act evidences this fact. In the said application made by the appellant for obtaining the said certificate, the appellant has in specific terms at serial No. (iv) of the Schedule included plant and machinery, railway sliding and other immovable properties as part of the fertilizer business undertaking. It is also found on record that by a supplementary affidavit dated 8.9.1993 filed before the Income Tax department while filing Form 37-I prescribed under the Income-tax Rules the petitioner has again shown all these plant and machinery along with the Plan which is now attached to the conveyance deed as part of the property that is being conveyed. Merely because in some of the relevant paragraphs of the Conveyance Deed the appellant has tried to highlight the fact that what is being sold under the conveyance deed is only the land and a reference is made in regard to the handing over of possession of the machinery on an earlier date does not ipso facto establish that the vendor did not convey the title of the plant and machinery under the conveyance deed dated 9.6.1994. Learned counsel for the appellant has placed for our consideration a judgment of this Court in the case of Himalaya House Co. Ltd., Bombay v. The Chief Controlling Revenue Authority (1972 1 SCC 726) to contend that a mere reference to an earlier agreement does not amount to incorporation of the terms and conditions of an earlier transaction or the intention of the parties. We have carefully considered the said judgment and, in our opinion, that judgment does not in any manner lay down the law in absolute terms that a court cannot look into prior agreements while considering the intention of the parties for finding out what actually is the property that is conveyed under the deed under consideration. It is again based on facts of that case that this Court came to the conclusion therein that the so called terms and conditions which were found in an earlier agreement were not intended to be incorporated in the subsequent document. This is clear from the following observations of this Court appearing in Para 10 of the said judgment : From the language used in the Assignment Deed, it is not possible to come to the conclusion that the terms and conditions of the earlier transaction have been made a part of that Deed. Further barring one particular agreement, other agreements were not before the Court. Therefore, it is not possible to know what the terms and conditions of those agreements were. Before the terms and conditions of an agreement can be said to have been incorporated into another document, the same must clearly show that the parties thereto intended to incorporate them. No such intention is available in this case.

Hence we are of the opinion that this judgment also does not help the appellant in his attempt to convince us that we should not take into consideration the recitals in the agreement dated 11.11.93 while considering the conveyance deed of 9.6.1994. For the reasons stated above, we are of the considered opinion that the vendor as per the conveyance deed dated 9.6.1994 has conveyed the title it had not only in regard to the land in question but also to the entire fertilizer business in as is where is condition including the plant and machinery standing on the said land. Therefore, the authorities below were totally justified in taking into consideration the value of these plant and machineries along with the value of the land for the purpose of the Act. The next point to be considered is whether the High Court was justified in accepting the valuation made by the authorities in regard to the plant and machinery. Here we must note that in the judgment of the High Court, the learned Judge has noted as follows : In fact the finding on valuation of plant and machinery was not seriously challenged by Shri Shanti Bhushan during the course of argument and, in my opinion, rightly. It is based on this approach of the learned counsel appearing for the appellant that the High Court did not go into the question of valuation. However, since the learned counsel for the appellant did question the correctness of the valuation made by the authorities below, we have heard the arguments addressed in this regard. We have also heard the arguments on behalf of the State on this score. The question of valuation is basically a question of fact and this Court is normally reluctant to interfere with the finding on such a question of fact if it is based on relevant material on record. The main objection of the appellant in regard to the valuation arrived at by the authorities is that the Collector originally constituted an Enquiry Committee consisting of the Assistant Inspector General (Registration), General Manager, District Industries Centre, Sub-Registrar and the Tehsildar. After the report was submitted by the Sub-Committee for the reasons of its own, the Collector reconstituted the said Enquiry Committee by substituting Additional City Magistrate in place of Sub-Registrar. This substitution of the Enquiry Committee, according to the appellant, is without authority of law. We are unable to accept this contention. Constitution of an Enquiry Committee by the Collector is for the purpose of finding out the true market value of the property conveyed under the Deed. In this process, the Collector has every authority in law to take assistance from such source as is available, even if it amounts to constituting or reconstituting more than one

Committee. That apart, the appellant has not been able to establish any prejudice that is caused to it by reconstitution of the Expert/Enquiry Committee. We have perused that part of the report of the Collector in which he has discussed in extenso the various materials that were available before the Committee and also the report of the valuers appointed for the purpose of finding out the value of the plant and machinery. These valuers are technical persons who have while valuing the plant and machinery taken into consideration all aspects of valuation including the life of the plant and machinery. The valuations made both by the Enquiry Committee as well as the valuers are mostly based on the documents produced by the appellant itself. Hence, we cannot accept the argument that the valuation accepted by the Collector and confirmed by the revisional authority is either not based on any material or a finding arrived at arbitrarily. Once we are convinced that the method adopted by the authorities for the purpose of valuation is based on relevant materials then this Court will not interfere with such a finding of fact. That apart, as observed above, even the counsel for the appellant before the High Court did not seriously challenge the valuation and as emphasised by the High Court, rightly so. Therefore, we do not find any force in the last contention of the appellant also. For the reasons stated above, this appeal fails and the same is dismissed with costs.
